In conjunction with this technology, the gameplay also makes use of contextual and intuitive input to contextualize the player's actions with tangible results. For example, heading a ball can make players more agile and aware of their surroundings when heading a ball while playing with the ball or when playing in a tunnel. Players react to playing conditions by anticipating specific situations. Now, if a goal is scored from a corner, the goal scorer will dribble into the space created by the defensive wall, exploit a loose ball, and face the direction of the ball in the air. And the defending team will adjust their approach depending on the type of scoring situation. For example, defenders will be attentive to the number of players in the penalty area, the trajectories of long passes, and will even back up a free kick to prevent a situation in which the opposing team scores an own goal.

FIFA Soccer's Best Feeling Season is Back The gameplay feature of contextual interactions from those who raise the ball are complemented by movements and actions from players around the pitch. For example, defenders will use laser awareness to read the movement of the ball carrier while off-sides are called for the correct decision-making in a dynamic post-tackle sequence. To add even more realism to the gameplay experience, this season there will be contextual and intuitive interactions with the ball and its trajectory: Fans can now show support for their favorite player or club in FIFA 22 by using their phone as a crossbar, displaying the player's name and current club score during a penalty or free kick. Players now use a new ball-shaping technique for takeaways, dribbling and shots to accelerate and control the ball. Dribbling in FIFA 22 is more realistic, and players must dodge defenders during takeaways and dribble further in the direction of the most open space in the game. Every takeaway and dribble around a defender will also be more tactical, allowing the player to dictate how to attack the pitch. Physically, players take advantage of the new balls that are re-shaped for their feet. This means they can more naturally time their acceleration, lean when turning and utilize feedback from the ball to accurately predict their next move. Movements and Touch while Overlaid FIFA 22 uses the same basic controls used in previous FIFA titles. For the first time ever, Players can move the ball with their hands on the D-Pad and

Features Key:

- Precision-crafted gameplay - Every element of the new game feels unique, from the enhanced visuals, intelligent agent behaviors and so much more. FIFA 25 will be the most authentic football experience on console.
- Intuitive coaching controls - Working with great coaches like Jupp Heynckes, FIFA 20 introduced all-new coaching controls, allowing players to focus on the football and take the right decisions at the right time by completing the touch in one continuous motion.
- Micro-managed players - With FIFA 22, every decision is matter of life and death. Within FIFA you'll find the greatest football moment, where a player makes a decision that shapes a game or is the difference-maker in winning or losing. Every dynamic decision is as important as the next and, with your support, we hope to learn from every single corner of the world's best leagues.
- Precise, authentic ball flight - With all-new ball physics, FIFA 22 feels more authentic and responsive than ever. With changes to aerodynamics and interactions, FIFA 22 refines this silent game-changer.
- Player-First Development - New immersive Player Career modes allow you to step inside the boots of YOUR PLAYER, using the latest attributes from our work with club academies, under-17 national teams and the world's elite. The new Development Prospectus gives you new pathways to drive players higher. Whether you aspire to the fast lane or the arduous grind, both modes offer the same potential to succeed.

Better AI in Knockout Games The philosophy of "rugby mentality" applied to knockout games. You will have an additional attacking option in knockout games. Making a better game isn't just about making better rosters; it's also about how we make our games. To do that, we're constantly looking at the business and play patterns of our community. From the technology we use to the voice acting we use and the animations we use, we constantly evaluate how to make the experience of playing a game more entertaining, more authentic and more emotional. And we're always thinking about how to allow players to spend more time enjoying the game, rather than watching matches, and how to make our games more "realistic." But, again, the foundation of any experience in a game is the gameplay. As we head into the latter half of the year and look to the next generation, the foundation of the game's engine was redesigned from the ground up to take player behaviors and player information and apply them to our systems, the way we conduct simulations and the way we make matches play out. We wanted to have an engine that would ensure that every single detail in the game, from how a player is controlled to the way they're able to handle the ball or the way they're able to shoot on goal, is made to reflect the realities of a real-world sport. We wanted to make it so that to replicate a football match, you really only needed to look at the engine. Our work is really building on what's been done in the past, but it's developing the engine into a more modern, more advanced tool. And when you apply those tools, the gameplay benefits in the game are there. It's a toolset that allows the game
