Features: Motion Capture Technology It's no longer about mimicking what the player is doing with your game engine. It's about reality. The player movements in the game are based on real player data captured during a real-life match. Every player's movements are recorded and quantified during a football match, captured in high-resolution from every movement of the real-life player in motion capture suits during a complete, high-intensity football match. The on-court movements of 22 players involved in a full 90 minute game were analysed, captured in high-resolution from every movement of the real-life player in motion capture suits. Using this data, we have created a dynamic team that reacts and counters in every way possible. Extensive Player Motion Analytics We've used the data to create the most authentic on-field movements in FIFA to date. Matchday Performance Analysis Cup Tournaments We’ve captured the same 22 players in motion capture suits, during their appearances in eight different player competitions in the 2017/18 season. We’ve captured player movement data as they played in three different tournament formats, the Champions League, Continental Cup and the Europa League FIFA 18 took motion capture technology a step further, capturing every player’s movement in-game with two cameras on the players at all times, just as the ball is played. In FIFA 17, we captured every player’s movement in-game with a single camera on the player at all times, just as the ball is played. In FIFA 14 and 15, we captured every player’s movement in-game with two cameras on the player at all times, just as the ball is played.
